SYLVESTER RAWLING. NNA PAVLOWA and Mikali Mordkin, with their company of Russian dancers, assisted by Alma Gluck, soprano, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, gave a delightful en-tertainment at the Metropolitan Opera House last night for the benefit of the Widowed Mothers' Fund Association. The audience was only of moderate size, but it showed its appreciation in a marked degree. The principal number was "The Legend of Asylade," ental ballet composed by Mr. Mordkin to music by half a dozen composers, which was seen last year. It was presented with such skill and grace and ift that the broad suggestion of the story was overlooked. Besides Mile. Pavlowa and Mr. Mordkin, Mile. Pajitzkala and Kyprian Barboe distinguished hemselves in the leading parts. This and Glinka's Polish dances and Liszt's and Glinka's Poilsh dances and Liszt's second Hungarian rhapsody engaged the services of the whole company, to which also Sergei Moroseff successfully contributed as a solo dancer. Mile: Paviowa gave her exquisite rendering of Saint-Saens's "The Swan," and Mr. Mordkin his famous Arrow dance, while together they did their fascinating interpretation of Glazoumow's Bacchanale, Alma Gluck, who took the place of Olive Fremstad, who is ill, sang an all from Rameau's "Hippolyte et Aricle," Robert Kahn's "Praciudium," Kurt Schinder's "Vergebilche Frage," Cadman's "From the Land of the Sky Blue Water" and "Charles G. Spross's "Will o' the Wisp." Her lovely voice was at 's best, and her clear enunciation, her archness and her ingratiating tion, her archness and her ingratiating style made her extremely captivating. RUSSIAN SOPRANO HEARD IN A VARIED SONG RECITAL

Nina Dimitrieff, a Russian soprano, gave a recital at Mendelssohn Hail last night before a moderately large and an altogether friendly audience. She disclosed a powerful voice of some quality, which she knew how to use, but her style was monotonous. Her programme. which was in four parts, included songs by Tschalkowsky, Dargo chsky, Rachmaninoff and Rimsky-Korsakoff in tussian; Strauss, Schubert, Brahms and humann in German; Massenet, Debus-

. Chaminade, Hahn and Thome in rench; Verdi in Italian, and Hadiley, lacDowell and Spross in English. Her littion was excellent. Like so many Greigners, she was a model to Ameri-an singers of how to enunciate Eng-ish. Her accompaniments were played admirably by Charles Gilbert Spross.

In Memory of "Little Tim." An anniversary mass will be cele-brated at 19 A. M. to-morrow in St. ann's Church in East Twelfth street for Smothy P. Sullivan, better known as Little Tim," who died a year ago. A very large number of Mr. Sullivan's friends will attend the services.
